NO POISON IN WESTERLY PIE

Yale Authority Finds Nothing Suspicious in Food Tested-So Reports to Coroner F. H. Brown of Norwich-District Court Cases-Uniformes for Watch Hill Firemen-

T Careless Shooting.

The Westerly town council has placed a broad interpretation of the law concerning the sale of milk, when those who serve milk, milk shakes or other milk drinks, at the soda fountains and restaurant proprietors who sell milk by the glass are classed as milk dealers and required to take out license the same as the dairymen or dealers who sell milk by measure. The council is probably acting under section two, and the milk inspector is instructed to enforce the law in conformance with that section, which reads:

"No passents of the was informed that there was no fine to be paid at present in that case as there was a probability of a jail sentence.

James Lavagran, pleaded not guilty to being a common drunkard. His case was continued to next Friday and the bond fixed at $300.

"No persons, firm, or corporation, as principal, servant, or agent, shall sell, exchange or deliver, or have in his or its possession, care custody or control with intent to sell, exchange or deliver, in any manner whatsoever, milk, cream, or skimmed milk, unless such person, firm, or corporation shall have first obtained and have in force a license therefor."

If that were the only section of the law, if that were the whole law, the action of the milk inspector, under direction of the town council might be justifiable. But, the opening section of the law makes it plain that the law was never intended, to apply to the soda fountain man or the restaurateur, who dispenses milk by the glass, any more than it would to the hotel man who serves milk at meals to

"Professor" John Lynch, of Ashaway, who had battled successfully with John Barleycorn for the past two years came to Westerly, Thursday, and Barleycorn and his allies captured the professor. He soon became surrounded by rum leeches, and was in the swift road to his old habit, when he was picked up by the police, Saturday night, and taken to the station house. When arraigned before Judge Williams, Lynch said it was his intention to cut out drink and return to his work in Ashawy and add to his pile of $1,400 that he had saved and deposited in the Washington Trust company. A fine of $2 and costs was imposed and paid. Lynch expressed willingness to pay the fine of a fellow prisoner, an old-time friend, who had been complained of as a common

As stated in the report of the ap-praisal of the bank by Messrs, Cut-ler, Richter and Beadle, "The primary object of a savings bank, and its greatest function, is to safely guard the principal of deposits received, and to return such principal ntact to the depositors when needed." Trustees Approve Suggestion.

Trustees Approve Suggestion.

These appraisers also suggested among the various ways of bringing the bank into a normal condition—"keeping the bank closed until the income makes good the depreciation."

The trustees have unanimously agreed that this is the wisest course for the bank to follow, the only available alternative being a scaling of deposits. Since Oct. 1, 1914 interest on the various investments amounting to $99,361.35 has been received; with this amount and the $137,150 in cash $99,361.35 has been received; with this amount and the $137,160 in cash which was on hand Oct. 1, 1914 the trustees have been able to make all oans required since that time from towns and cities and on mortgage loans and on passbooks and have deposited in natioal banks and trust cocpanies at the present time $37,793.-06 at current rates of interest which Why Securities Depreciated.

The railroad bonds which are carried on the books of the bank for $1,772,750 have a par value of $2,884.000; at the time they were purchased they were undoubtedly considered among the best of securities. Within the past few years several things have occurred to cause them to lose favor with the investing public. The vari-ous requirements of the National and State governments, the increase in the cost of labor and nearly all material, with only a small increase in freight rates, and a period of years with gross receipts at a low point, have all combined to reduce the net has been depressed, because the margin of net earnings after payment of fixed interest charges and taxes has been decreased, as a rule, with

If in forecasting the future we had only had to consider our own National problems the situation would be somewhat simplified, but with all Europe at war and borrowing heavily from this country and the uncertainfrom this country and the uncertainty of future as to interest rates and ne market price for securities. situation is much more complex. Even if the war ended today it seems probable that this country will be asked to furnish the European nations large amounts of money and material, for a number of years, that they may again rebuild their devastated nations. There is not past with which to compare the present; the future as to market prices for securities and rates fror money is largely a conjecture.

As long as our securities are kept for income purposes and we do not care to sell them, we are not much affected by their marketability. Now we are approaching a time when we shall want to turn at least part of them into cash, the price at which they can be sold is of the utmost importance to us.

The end may not come immediately, but it will come sooner than ately, but it will come sooner than ately, but it will come sooner than ately. All Depends on Prices of Bonds.

As stated in an authorized article published in the local papers Jan. 22, 1915, some time this year the trustees of the bank expect, if its securities return in value to at least the basis of the July 2, 1914 appraisal, that the bank will reach a sound and solvent condition, showing sound and solvent condition, showing a surplus, and will then be able to resume its normal functions of re-ceiving and paying deposits, and will rom that time resume the payment of interest on deposits. This statement holds true, and the opening of the bank this fall or releasing all or part of its deposits depends altogether upon the market price of its bonds.

The first duty of the bank to its depositors is to put itself in a condition that it can pay every depositor in full if required; after that time its earnings can be applied to dividends; the has been the aim of its trustees. Hope for Peace and Prosperity.

The European situation has brought about the sale of a large amount of American securities from abroad which had a depressing effect upon
